

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

EFF COMM 001

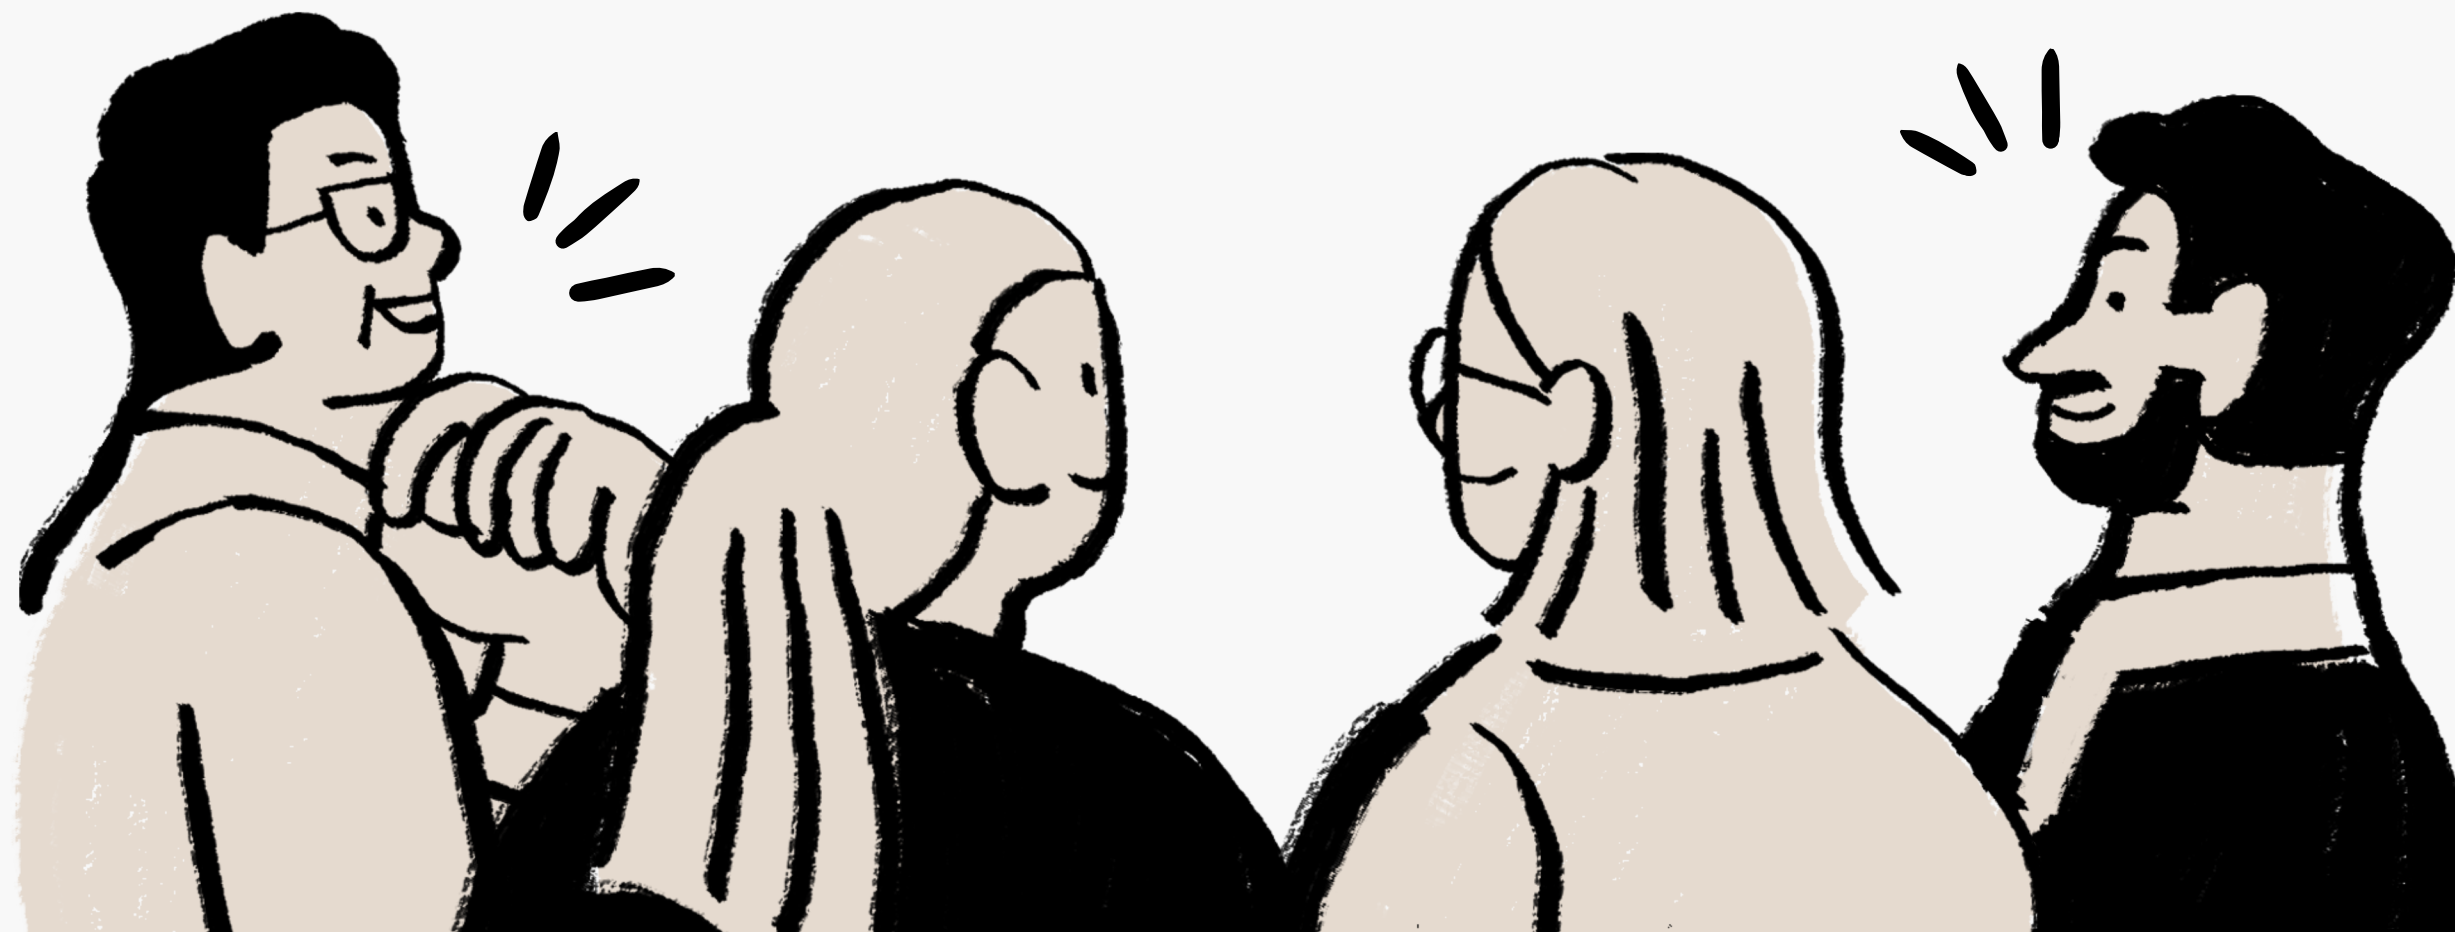

-MISS ALYSSA-

Politeness Markers and Conversation Management Strategies

LC:

- Use language, tone, and structure appropriately for audience, purpose, and context in discussing a variety of personal, interpersonal, social, and cultural topics.
- Use politeness markers and conversation management signals and strategies (e.g., topic nomination, topic shift/control, turn-taking, back-channeling, feedback-giving, and topic termination).

Nomination

- A speaker carries out a nomination to collaboratively present a topic (clearly, truthfully, and relevant).

“Hello, guys! Have you heard the NEW ONLINE POLICY?”

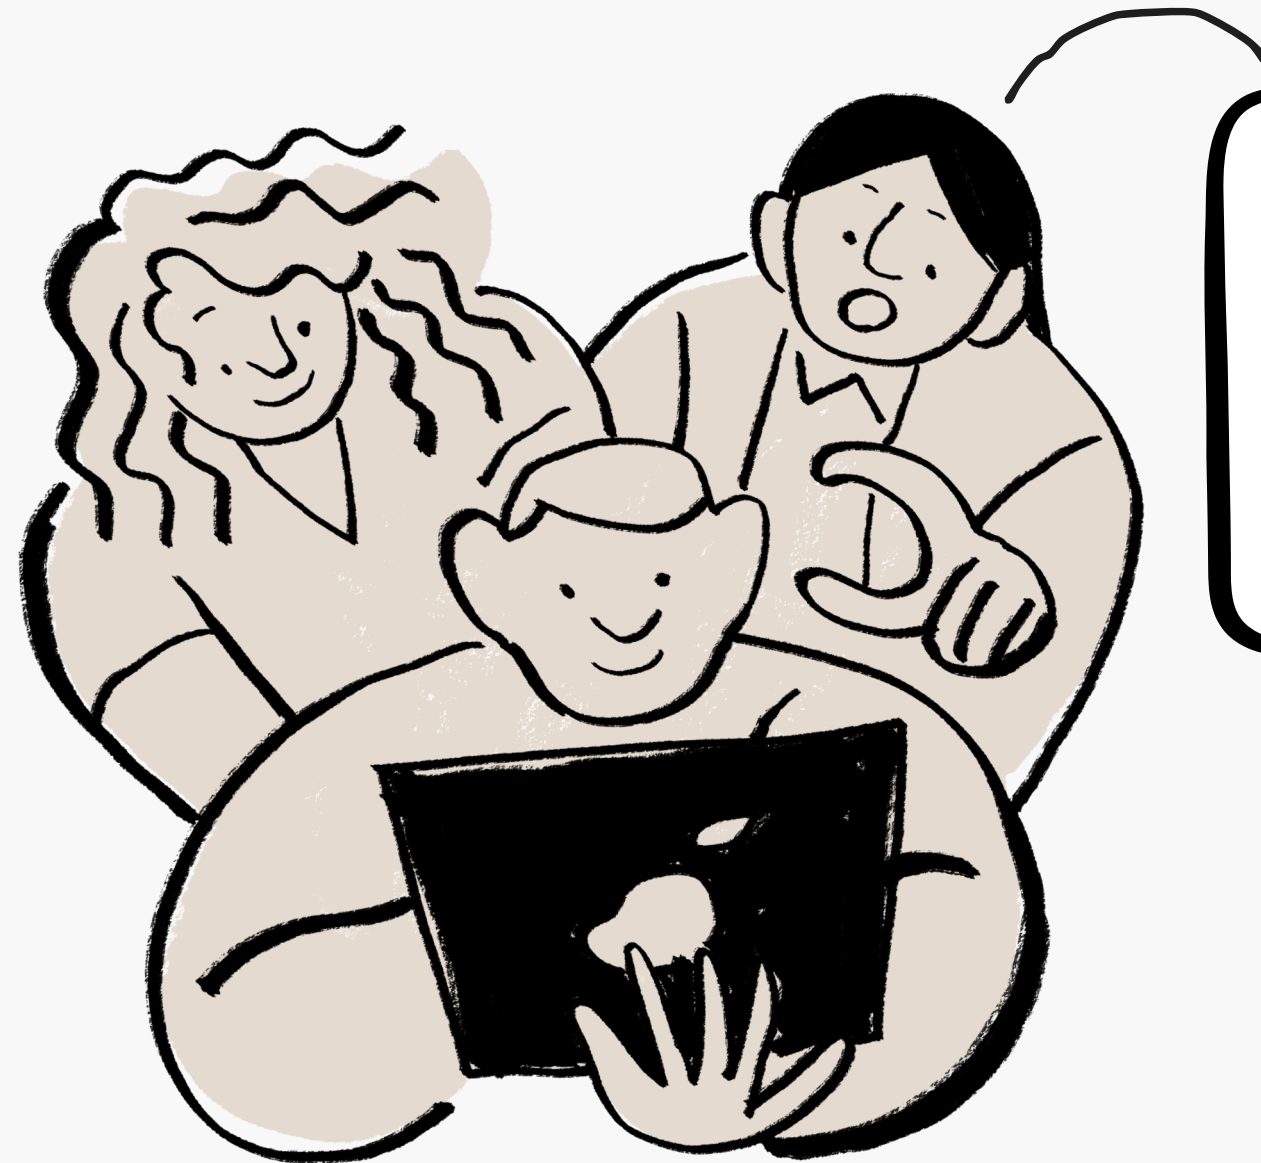

SENDER

“You know what, I am bad at HISTORY, but I can remember when I FIRST SAW YOU”

SENDER

Restriction

- It refers to any limitation in the communication that you may have as a speaker

“Write an English speech about Flood Control Projects”

Turn-taking

- It pertains to the process by which people decide who will take the conversational floor
- One-mouth Policy
- Acknowledgment (yes, nod, eye contact)

Go on with your ideas, I'll let you finish first before I say anything."

"I think..."

"That's good!"

Topic control

- It keeps the interaction going by asking questions and eliciting responses (actively developing the topic).

“Be reminded that our topic only concerns speeches in the Filipino context.”

....

Topic shifting

- It involves the process of moving from one topic to another topic

“It seems like we’ll be having nice weather. Anyway, would you like to go out with me?”

Repair

- It is a self-correcting mechanism in any social interaction

“My number is 0-9-1-7-5-6-7-8- 9-1-0. I’ll just write it down.”

“Repeat it again? I mean, we should repeat it.”

Back-Channeling

- Non-intrusive vocalizations or gestures that show you are listening without taking over the speaker's turn.

Nodding, "Uh-huh,"

maintaining eye contact

Feedback-Giving

- Providing a substantive response to what was said to ensure mutual understanding.

"So, what you are saying is that the timeline is too short. I agree, we should ask for an extension."

Termination

- It refers to the close-initiating expression that ends a topic in a conversation

“That is all for today, class. Goodbye!”

SEEN

Politeness Markers

These are words or phrases used to show respect, soften demands, and maintain social harmony.

- Hedging: Softening a statement to sound less aggressive (e.g., "I kind of think," "It might be better if...").
- Honorifics/Titles: Using "Sir," "Ma'am," or professional titles (Dr., Professor) when cultural or social contexts demand respect.
- Gratitude/Apologies: "Please," "Thank you," "Excuse me."

Question?

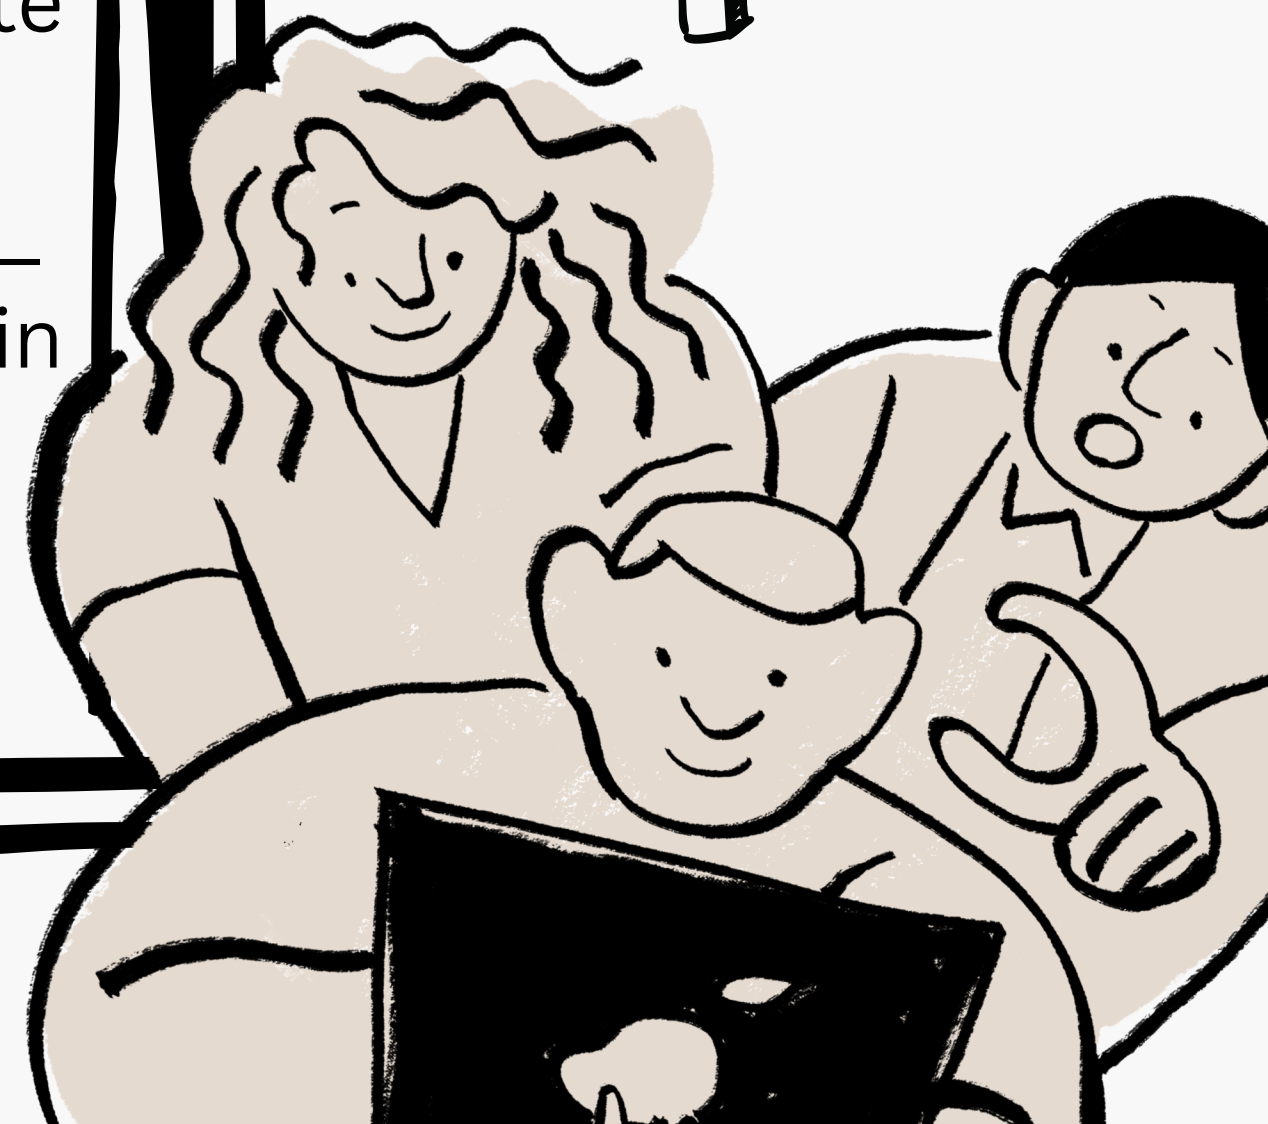

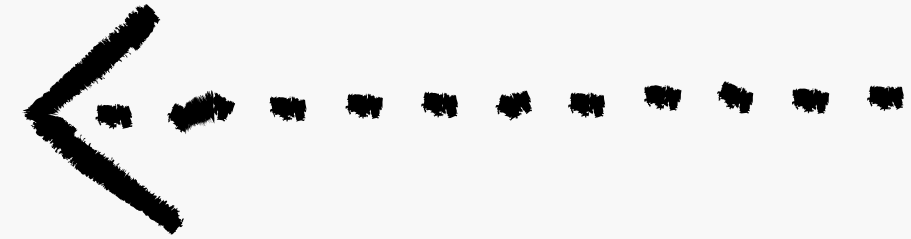

EXIT TICKETS

Write 2-3 things they learned about how conversations can be managed better.

1. One thing I learned about effective communication is _____.
2. A strategy I used during the activity to communicate clearly was _____.
3. If I could do this activity again, I would _____.
4. I think this activity helped me improve my skills in _____ because _____.

THANK YOU

